Indian Games

1.Lagori or Pithu: It involves a ball and a pile of flat stones (which are stacked on top of each other). One member of a team throws the ball at the stack to knock the stones over. The team then tries to restore the pile of stones while the opposing team (known as the hitters) throws the ball at them. If the ball touches a person, he is out and his team continues without him.

2.Kho Kho: The game consists of two teams, who are required to chase down and tag the players of the opposite team to win the game. The chasing team sends out nine players onto the field, who sit in a straight line with alternate players facing opposite sides. The chasers have to make sure they catch the runners (who enter the field one at a time) before time runs out. Played by: two teams of nine players each.

1.Gilli Danda: Gilli Danda is a game very similar to cricket and baseball; its popularity in India once rivalled that of cricket. The game is played with a small piece of wood reduced on both sides known as gilli and a large piece of wood that is used to hit the gilli known as danda. The aim of the game is to hit the gilli as far as possible. Played by : two teams, any number of players.

2.Kabaddi: Kabaddi is an Indian origin game that was on its way to extinction, but is now regaining its popularity. There are several forms of the game, but most involve two teams of seven players each, who have a designated area of their own. Players have to raid the other team's area and try and touch one of their players, hence making the touched player "out." Played by: two teams of 7 members each

Sportsmanship

Good sportsmanship begins with an understanding that the principle nature of athletics, sports, and physical education are an integral part of the educational process, presenting innumerable opportunities to learn skills that last a lifetime.

Good sportsmanship dictates:

Respect – Athletes should display proper respect and courtesy, and maintain civility toward opposing coaches and athletes, game officials and spectators at all contests. Most importantly, athletes must respect the game and uphold its virtues.

Discipline – There is no place in athletics for taunting, embarrassing or humiliating an opponent or game official.

Humility – Sportsmanship understands that failure is part of the game. The player with good sportsmanship does not use the occasion to make excuses or blame. They maintain composure, learn from their mistakes and prepare for the next competition.

Rules – Part of good sportsmanship is knowing the rules of the game and playing by them.

Excellence – Personal mastery, increased skill development, as well as performing to the best of your abilities are the hallmarks of good sportsmanship.

Teamwork – Good sportsmanship implies that the player on a team is a team player. In other words, the player understands that his or her behavior reflects on the team in general.
